Design Notes: The University of South Carolina School of Business Administration and Economics is a project that showcases epoxy terrazzo. A four-color design scheme, laid out as a border-and-field pattern reinforces the architecture of each room. The neutral matrix colors allow the hue to be created by the rich colors of the natural stone aggregate. The design was chosen to mimic a traditional sand cushion terrazzo system while drawing on the design flexibility of epoxy. The field was divided into square and diamond shapes, depending on the architectural expression of the room. Borders contain metal stylized currency symbols, meant to reinforce the mission of the building as a business school. Within the terrazzo floor there are hybrid dollars and cents symbols which also double as the "SC" abbreviation for South Carolina. Other symbols include the Euro, the Pound, and the Yen/Yaun, with a fourth symbol incorporating all three. Metal currency symbols were brought into the lobby where an elaborate design of divider strips serves to communicate the theme of the building.

With terrazzo, the possibilities are endless. Let the floor be your canvas and bring terrazzo into your next project by contacting your Architectural Sales Consultant for assistance at 800.7.MARBLE or visit www.tmsupply.com.
